

Research: Policies, plans...action! is an introductory course that gives participants the tools to not only conduct research projects, but to also develop research policies and plans for their institutions. The course introduces how research can be used to enhance collections, develop exhibits, and build community relationships by providing insight on appropriate sources and resources for conducting research. The course also guides participants in developing (or revising) a defined research policy and outlines how to design a research plan.

Participants will learn to:

- Identify research sources and their advantages/disadvantages
- Develop a research plan, focusing your research
- Develop a research policy, identify elements required

The course will be delivered in 4 live online sessions via Zoom starting at 7 PM and running for 60 – 90 minutes (the first session is usually longer, allowing for introductions and housekeeping).

Dates:

Session 1 – February 8, 2023
Session 2 – February 15, 2023

Session 3 – February 22, 2023
Session 4 – March 1, 2023
